	The course is designed to run with dial-up, DSL or high speed. Although the course is designed to run on dial-up, dial-up is not recommended. Other than your internet browser, no additional software is required.
Online Information and time commitment:	Most students will have to commit to approximately 6 – 7 hours a week for this course with at least half of those hours being online completing the section quizzes, chapter tests and responding to the topic board discussions. Although you do have the comfort of working most of your class from home or any other convenient online accessible location, many students assume that online classes are easier than traditional classes. The opposite is generally true. You must be highly motivated and self-disciplined to successfully complete the course.
Additional Instructions for registered students:	First you must register for this class through the CNM student registration. Then, if you do not already have a Blackboard user name, access Blackboard and create a user name and password - http://elearning.cnm.edu. Next, email me (bbarr2@cnm.edu) your user name and I will add you to the class. Please put MATH 1310 HYBRID in the subject line of the email. I do not need your password. I will send you an email to confirm that you have been added. Email will only be sent to your CNM email address. Once you have been added this course, please read all information on the homepage. If you cannot show up for the first Montoya campus
